Exceptional first-line progression — 96th pctl.

Calm under pressure — 92nd percentile goal-side positioning

Already stabilises the game's most unstable moments

WHY THIS DOESN'T ADD UP

01

98th percentile time to sprint

02

96th percentile passes around the first line

03

94th percentile passes through the first line

04

92nd percentile goal-side positioning

05

THE OPPORTUNITY

A Structural Midfielder Who Stabilises Transitions. Available Now.

IDEAL FOR CLUBS THAT

- Suffer turnover-prone build-up despite playing direct, vertical football
- Need composure in the game's highest-variance moments
- Want a midfielder who reduces chaos without reducing directness
- Value physical ceiling alongside tactical discipline

MARKET INSIGHT

Recruitment discussions around young midfielders often focus on creativity or physical upside. Much rarer are players who already improve team structure under pressure while still possessing elite athletic potential.

WHY NOW

Born 2007 — significant physical upside

Elite transition profile

Structural midfielder, not a project

Resale potential

Market still prices potential over quiet impact

B360 ASSESSMENT

Matias Siltanen doesn't remove chaos from the game. He allows his team to function within it. His combination of press resistance, line-breaking progression, and elite short-distance explosiveness stabilises the moments where modern matches are most often won and lost.

THE ARGUMENT IN ONE SENTENCE

A rare opportunity to acquire a structural midfielder who already stabilises transition moments while still offering the physical ceiling and resale potential of a 2007-born player.
